About the Film

When Dolly Parton sang "9 to 5," she was doing more than just shining a light on the fate of American working women. Parton was singing the true story of a movement that started with 9to5, a group of Boston secretaries in the early 1970s. Their goals were simple—better pay, more advancement opportunities, and an end to sexual harassment—but their unconventional approach attracted the press and shamed their bosses into change.

Featuring interviews with 9to5's founders, as well as actor and activist Jane Fonda, 9to5: The Story of a Movement is the previously untold story of the fight that inspired a hit song and changed the American workplace.

Please note: This event will be streamed to a live audience via PBS' virtual streaming platform. Attendees will not be on camera or audio but will have an opportunity to engage with our special guests and other attendees via the chat feature. You will receive additional information about how to access the screening after you register.
